

Gift Cards

Gift cards cost from £5 and help in one of four different projects:-

School Desks. Ever thought how hard it must be to learn to write sitting on the floor? Many poor schools in the Kimilili area have little furniture for their pupils.

School desks cost £20 each and accommodate two children (four if they are small!). They are hand made by local Kimilili carpenters and each year The Kimilili Trust gives them to the ten Kimilili schools that have made the most improvement in their results. This is a superb gift for you to choose since schools are encouraged to raise standards, children get to sit on a seat at a desk, and a local carpenter gets work to help feed and maintain his family. Its win, win, win all the way!

School Books. Learning to read in both English and Swahili is a MUST for Kenyan children if they are to make any progress. Gift cards for reading or school text books cost £5 and The Kimilili Trust deposits the money with a trusted local bookseller in Kimilili and teachers choose the titles they want.

Agricultural Tools. Most of the people who live in the Kimilili area support themselves by farming. But many children have lost parents because of AIDS so traditional methods of teaching agricultural techniques need to be supplemented by schools and youth groups like scouts. Traditional tools, bought in Kimilili market from local traders by The Kimilili Trust, help in this work. Gift cards for agricultural tools cost £5.

£5 buys a chicken... The Kimilili Trust runs a project called Revolving Chickens. There are many young children in the Kimilili area who because of the devastation caused by AIDS live with aged female relatives. These family groups are usually in great poverty. The Kimilili Trust lends such a group three chickens, teaching them how to care for them and breed from them. When three chicks are hatched these are returned to us to be grown on for another poor family. The original chickens then belong to the family who can breed more chicks or sell the eggs in the market and thus lift themselves out of poverty and regain their dignity. A local vet supports the scheme with tuition and advice.

School Books

The ability to read in both English and Swahili is an important skill for any young person growing up in Kenya. School text and reading books are an essential part of learning. The books above, and others like them, were bought by the Kimilili Trust from a Kimilili bookseller for a primary school in Kimilili. With the proceeds from this card more schools will be able to benefit from appropriate books.

A Revolving Chicken

Our Revolving Chickens lead a useful life. We lend them, three at a time, to a poor family. A vet gives instructions on how to look after them and breed from them. When there are three young chicks to spare these are given back to us and we grow them on for another family. Your gift will increase our flock of Revolving Chickens, helping poor families fight hunger and regain their dignity.

Each card is A5 size and comes with its own envelope. The back of the card tells the recipient something about the Kimilili Trust. Inside the card there are pictures illustrating the work of the Trust and the following words*:
